

1.3.1 Institution integrates crosscutting issues relevant to Professional Ethics, Gender, Human Values, Environment and Sustainability into the Curriculum

RESPONSE: The institution's Department of Business Administration offers courses centred on Professional ethics, emphasizing the importance of ethical conduct in the business world. Simultaneously, the Department of Political Science has introduced a course addressing Human Rights with a particular focus on Gender issues, fostering awareness and advocacy.

Students are exposed to a foundational course in Environmental Studies as part of their curriculum. This course delves into the methods and motivations behind environmental sustainability, instilling a sense of responsibility towards the environment. Department of English through its curriculum inculcate spoken English to the students.

Beyond formal coursework, faculty members are deeply committed to mentoring students throughout the academic year. They play a vital role in instilling essential human values and contributing to students' personal growth and character development.

Furthermore, the institution's Department of Counselling Psychology boasts a team of highly skilled counsellors who professionally nurture and shape students' characters. Their expertise ensures that students receive the necessary guidance and support to navigate the challenges they encounter during their educational journey. Collectively, these academic and personal development initiatives create a well-rounded educational experience for the students.